THE CONSPIRACY

FILED

OCT 24 2023

CLERK U.S. DISTRICT COURT
WEST. DIST. OF PENNSYLVANIA

1. From in and around January 2019, and continuing thereafter to in and around October 2023, in the Western District of Pennsylvania and elsewhere, the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, and other individuals known and unknown to the grand jury, knowingly and willfully did conspire, combine, confederate and agree with each other to commit Mail Fraud, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1341, and Wire Fraud, in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1343.

OVERVIEW OF THE CONSPIRACY

2. The defendant, JASON PLUMMER, a resident and citizen of Jamaica, conspired with others known and unknown to the grand jury, to target elderly and otherwise vulnerable victims (hereinafter “the victims”) in the United States with a scheme to defraud that was designed to deceive the victims into providing their money and property to members of the conspiracy, based on the false pretense that they had won a million or multi-million-dollar sweepstakes, but needed to pay taxes and other costs before receiving their winnings (hereinafter, the “lottery scam”).

MANNER AND MEANS OF THE CONSPIRACY

The Lottery Scam

3. It was a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, obtained the names and contact information for victims whom they intended to target with the lottery scam. In shopping for these leads, members of the conspiracy specifically requested information belonging to victims who were over 75 years of age and had previously expressed an interest in sweepstakes or gambling.

4. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy contacted these victims by telephone and falsely informed them that they had won a sweepstakes, usually a million dollars or more, and other benefits, including luxury vehicles. Members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, also sent emails to the victims, which attached letters and fliers purporting to describe the sweepstakes and the victims' winnings. Members of the conspiracy also promised victims that their winnings would be delivered to them in person.

5. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that, through sustained contact with the victims, and small gifts like the delivery of flowers, members of the conspiracy attempted to ingratiate themselves with the victims, earn their trust, and obtain detailed information about their personal lives and finances, that the conspirators would then use to exploit them.

6. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that, through telephone calls, emails, and written materials, members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, falsely informed the victims that it was necessary for them to pay certain taxes and fees before they could receive their sweepstakes winnings.

7. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that, in attempting to convince the victims to pay the purported taxes and fees, members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, impersonated officials from government agencies, including the Internal Revenue Service, Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Federal Trade Commission, as well as private individuals in positions of trust, including financial advisors and attorneys.

8. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy sought to design a system for deceiving victims into believing that they were talking over the telephone to a representative of a financial institution when, in reality, they were talking to a member of the conspiracy.

9. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that, in order to conceal their true identities, members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, used aliases, frequently changing telephone numbers, and email addresses unconnected to their real names when communicating with the victims.

10. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, directed the transfer of funds from the victims to members of the conspiracy, including those located abroad in Jamaica and other locations, and took steps to conceal the nature, location, source, ownership, and control of those funds.

11. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, instructed the victims to send funds, including by wire transfers, check, bulk cash, and postal money orders, to individuals and addresses designated by the members of the conspiracy. The victims believed that these funds would be used to pay necessary taxes and fees, and thereby allow them to receive their sweepstakes winnings. In reality, however, these funds were destined for members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER.

12. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy directed the victims to destroy information about the addresses to which they had sent checks, bulk cash, and postal money orders at the direction of the conspirators, and to delete their messages related to these transactions.

13. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, used a network of “money mules” to receive funds obtained from victims as part of the lottery scam and transfer them to members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER. Some of these money mules were themselves victims of the lottery scam who had also been deceived into accepting and transferring funds on behalf of members of the conspiracy.

14. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, instructed victims of the lottery scam and money mules to open new bank and credit card accounts to which members of the conspiracy would have access, or otherwise obtained access to victims’ existing bank and credit card accounts. These bank accounts, in the names of the victims and money mules, facilitated the covert transfer and withdrawal, including in Jamaica, of funds obtained through the lottery scam by members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER.

15. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, used personally identifying information obtained from the victims, or information that was otherwise publicly available, to open new bank and credit card accounts in the victims’ names, without their consent. These new accounts also facilitated the covert transfer and withdrawal of funds obtained through the lottery scam by members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER.

16. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, instructed the victims to purchase gift cards, read the card numbers over the telephone to members of the conspiracy, and then destroy the gift cards.

17. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy obtained and attempted to obtain goods and luxury items using victim funds, either by causing the victims to purchase them and provide them to members of the conspiracy, or by purchasing them using accounts belonging to the victims but under the control of members of the conspiracy.

18. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy induced the victims to liquidate investments; sell homes; drain savings accounts; open new bank accounts; take out loans against their homes, vehicles, or annuities; surrender their Social Security benefits; and take other drastic financial steps in order to pay the fees that the victims believed were necessary to obtain their lottery winnings.

Use of Interstate Mails, Commercial Carriers, and Wires

19. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, caused the transmission of signals in interstate and foreign commerce by means of wire communications when they communicated with one another and victims of the lottery scam via phone calls, text messages, communication applications, and emails, and when they electronically transferred funds derived from the lottery scam using bank websites and services like Zelle and Cash App.

20. It was further a manner and means of the conspiracy that members of the conspiracy, including the defendant, JASON PLUMMER, instructed victims of the lottery scam to send funds, including checks, bulk cash, money orders, and gift cards, to money mules and other members of the conspiracy through the United States Postal Service and interstate commercial carriers.

In violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1349.
